Shakespeare in the Park

Memorial Park Amphitheater 7:30 PM

July 22, 23, 28, 29, 30 August 4, 5, 6

Written by William Shakespeare | Directed by Stephen Muterspaugh

In 2017, San Francisco Shakespeare Festival celebrates 35 years as the Bay Area's acclaimed provider of free and accessible Shakespeare performances and education programs. For this historic year, SF Shakes will present Hamlet for the first time at Free Shakespeare in the Park. The play, about the questionable succession of King Claudius to the throne of Denmark over his nephew Prince Hamlet, speaks strongly about disenfranchisement, frustration, and the need for action during troubled times. Hamlet is torn between revenging his father's murder and going along quietly with the new regime, including his mother Queen Gertrude. Finding an ally in the audience, he shares his inner turmoil in a series of soliloquies which have become familiar all over the world from "Oh, what a rogue and peasant slave am I" to "To be or not to be" to "How all occasions do inform against me."
