Let's Save the Food – Freezer Style.

Twenty percent of the food we each buy never gets eaten. We've all been there – we buy or cook too much, go on vacation, or make last-minute plans to eat out – and before we know it, we have food spoiling in our fridges. During these times, use your freezer to preserve food until you're ready to eat it. Freeze in portions – slice that bread and store soups and stews in muffin tins. Keep it air-tight to reduce freezer burn – squeeze excess air from plastic bags and containers and wrap meats in plastic wrap or freezer paper. Dedicate a freezer night or two each week. Not only will it reduce food waste, but you'll also have a delicious meal at your fingertips on your busiest nights. Tips and information from www.savethefood.com.

Too Late to Save the Food? Then Compost It.

Unwanted food can go in your yard waste cart: food prep scraps, uneaten food left on plates, freezer-burned food, food that was forgotten and got moldy, bones, meat, bread, veggies – the cart can take it all! Composting is an easy way to keep organic material out of the landfill and reduce the greenhouse gases that contribute to climate change. When food scraps are sent to the landfill, they emit methane, which is 25 times more potent a greenhouse gas than carbon dioxide. Compost made from the food scraps is a valuable resource for landscapers, farmers, community and home gardens. Cupertino composts and so should you! Learn more at www.cupertino.org/compost.
