Dining Out This Summer: Part II

This is the last article in a two-part series.

Summer and sunshine are in full swing for Cupertino. If you enjoyed the suggestions for outdoor dining in last month's edition of The Scene, here are a few more places to try. Do you have a favorite outdoor dining spot in Cupertino? Please share your suggestions with me!

Here are some new and familiar places that offer outdoor dining for you to enjoy:

Garlic Mediterranean Grill | 19620 Stevens Creek Blvd
Hands down one of the best Mediterranean restaurants in the South Bay. Its menu includes excellent Turkish entrees, including the Iskender Kebab Plate. All their wraps, from falafel to different choices of meats, are fan favorites.

Meet Fresh | 19449 Stevens Creek Boulevard
A popular place for Taiwanese shaved ice with topping choices that include herbal jelly and taro root mocha; exquisite tea drinks, desserts, and snacks.

MOD Pizza | 10815 N Wolfe Road
You choose your toppings from meaty to vegan and everything in between for one set price. You get just what you want—no judgement and no calculator needed! Then your pizza is ready within minutes.

Panino Giusto | 19469 Stevens Creek Boulevard
This Milan-based chain offers fresh hot panini, refreshing salads, and savory small plates. The experience feels like visiting Italy.

Arya Global Cuisine | 19930 Stevens Creek Blvd
Arya offers more than the typical Middle Eastern restaurant by proudly featuring Persian cuisine, as well as Italian favorites! Whether you're in the mood to try something exotic and different, or sit back and enjoy into your favorite comfort food, you will find just what you've been craving.

Steins Beer Garden & Restaurant | 10088 N Wolfe Rd
A lively spot to enjoy gourmet comfort food with 30 craft brews on tap and house-made cocktails. The indoor, green living wall can make you feel as if you're sitting outside, but take advantage of their outdoor dining area for the full effect.

Kong Tofu & BBQ Korean Cuisine | 19626 Stevens Creek Blvd
Korean BBQ that you don't have to barbeque yourself! Enjoy a wide selection of authentic Korean entrees from a variety of BBQ meats to spicy ramen. Perfect outdoor dining fare!

The Melt | 20803 Stevens Creek Boulevard
Having started as a food truck concept, The Melt has found a home in Cupertino with all its classic comforts of grilled cheese-based sandwiches and hearty soups. Don't take my word for it, check out all they have to offer.

K-9 Cop Comes to Cupertino

The Santa Clara County Sheriff's Office has a new recruit who's keeping his nose to the ground. Dutch, a two-year-old Dutch Shepherd, officially began his tenure with the West Valley Division in May. He's been given multiple responsibilities: sniffing out narcotics, tracking suspects, locating lost individuals, and being an ambassador for the Sheriff's Office to the Cupertino community.

"Dutch will certainly complement our community relations team by virtue of having a dog's playful and friendly demeanor," Captain Rich Urena said.

Keeping His Eye on the Ball

Dutch is partnered with Deputy Michael Keck, a four-year veteran with the Sheriff's Office. Dutch is not only Deputy Keck's first four-legged partner, he's also the West Valley Division's first full-time K-9.

"This is considered one of the best jobs in law enforcement," he said. "It's an awesome opportunity to do a lot of really cool things."

Dutch is expected to be up for the challenge.

The Dutch Shepherd originated in the Netherlands as a jack-of-all-trades dog that could meet the various needs of shepherds and farmers, the American Kennel Club states. Dutch Shepherds had an assortment of roles that included keeping hens out of family gardens, herding cows for milking, pulling carts to market, watching the family children, and alerting farmers to strangers.

The breed's characteristics come out in Dutch, an athletic and lively dog that likes to keep moving. No matter what's going on around him or what he's being asked to do, however, he has his mind on the true prize.

"The biggest thing he's looking for is his reward. His drive to get the tennis ball will lead him to do anything for you," Deputy Keck said.

Partners in Crime (Fighting)

Dutch does go home with Deputy Keck, so theirs is a 24-hour relationship. Luckily, Dutch can leave work at work.

"He absolutely understands the difference between work and play," Deputy Keck said. "I can take him home and he's not looking for drugs the whole time he's there."

Part of the reason is in Dutch's continued training. Dutch is given different equipment in various environments. While he may be given a certain leash and collar in one scenario, he will be given a different leash and a harness for a different task. Over time he begins to associate the specific gear.

"I have a ball that I use just for his narcotics detection training. So he knows when he's wearing this equipment and I show him this ball that he's going to go out there to look for drugs," Deputy Keck said.

Dutch is also somewhat of a renaissance man as he's been trained in multiple languages. But Deputy Keck said that he will use only German, which is the most common language used with police and military canines.

"You want to do that in the event that something happened to me and a different handler had to take care of Dutch or give him commands at a crime scene," he said. "They would be able to give him commands that he would understand, so it wouldn't necessarily be totally foreign to him."

Must Love Dogs

The West Valley Division identified the need for its own K-9 after a recent internal review of incidents where K-9 assistance was requested. It was determined that K-9 units helped resolve about 65% of the incidents they were involved in.

In addition to Dutch's main duties, he and Deputy Keck will also be asked for other calls-for-service, such as checking residences at alarm calls and helping with containment when perimeters are set up.

"Dutch will be an excellent community policing tool," Captain Urena said. "He'll help break down potential barriers between the police and residents.

"And, let's face it. Who doesn't love dogs?"

Emergency Preparedness Comes to the App Store

Emergency preparedness? There's an app for that. "Ready 95014" is the City of Cupertino's new emergency preparedness mobile app that will help residents plan ahead and be better prepared for real-life emergencies.

There are multiple levels to the app:

- Users can learn how to build a preparedness kit by playing a fun, interactive game that takes them to various rooms in a home
- They can set up reminders to check the contents of their preparedness kit
- Out-of-area contacts can be created in the app, which will be useful numbers to contact during a real emergency
- App users can learn about local ARKs, storage containers which store important supplies and communication resources and serve as a gathering places for the local community during emergencies
- Users can sign up for AlertSCC to receive notifications during an emergency or disaster, listen to Cupertino Radio 1670 AM, or browse Cupertino's social media sites for emergency messages, City news, and events.

Be prepared and download the Ready 95014 app from the App Store and Google Play. The app can be downloaded on smartphones and tablets.

THE SCENE ANSWERS

Have questions for staff? Send them to scene@cupertino.org or call (408) 777-3212.

Question: I've noticed that there has been a lot of work done on Cupertino's roads in the past few years, but some streets could still use some attention. Will the City be paving any more roads in the near future?

Answer: Absolutely. The City of Cupertino's annual paving season began earlier this summer. The City Council had approved a $3.07 million contract to resurface local streets with a portion of the funding coming through the State of California's Senate Bill 1 (SB1).

The resurfacing project will upgrade approximately 8.5 miles of residential roads within Cupertino. A future contract to seal 4.5 miles of local roads is expected to be awarded this summer. In total, more than 12 percent of the City's residential roads will be treated this season.

Concrete improvements, including removal and replacement of existing sidewalks and installation of ADA-accessible curb ramps at street corners, have already been completed. Bike lane improvements will also be completed at select locations as part of the resurfacing project.

Upon completion, these projects will create a safer environment for bicyclists and pedestrians in addition to providing a smoother ride for motorists.

For information on the streets to be paved, visit www.cupertino.org and search for "SB1."

Roger Lee is Assistant Director of the Public Works Department. He is responsible for operations and maintenance of many City assets within City-owned properties and public right-of-way. Among these assets is the 140-mile street network.
